Pokemon fans gotta "catch'em all" when it comes to collector's items, and the limited edition Pikachu themed 3DS XL has been no exception to the list.

With most retailers having a limited allotment of 2 handhelds per store, this cute and cuddly Nintendo system sold fast in both the US and Japan.

The newest 3DS XL sells for $199.99 in stores and dons a bright yellow exterior with Pikachu's head and arms on the front and his tail on the back. When opened, users will find a white interior identical to the pink 3DS XL model. It also comes with a 4GB SD card to save street passes, photos, videos, and a growing collection of digital games.

Like other XL models, it also features a screen that's over 90% larger than the original 3DS so you can enjoy a crisp, larger picture for a better three-dimensional gaming experience.

Released on the same day as Pokemon Mystery Dungeon: Gates to Infinity, it's the perfect buy for Pokemon fans young and old.

If you missed your chance to buy it in-store, the iconic handheld is being sold on ebay for anywhere between $200 and $400 dollars.
